F. D. STUDYING TWO FEATURES

How To Finance Extensive Public Works Program Is 'Fly In Ointment.'

WASHINGTON, May 12.—The administration's plan for recapturing prosperity, by stabilization of industry and a huge public works program, was before President Roosevelt today for a decision on two vital features.

The president faced the problem of determining how to enforce fair trade agreements on industry and how to finance a $3,300,000,000 public works program. Three alternative plans were submitted.

The most important decision involved the issue of compelling acceptance of stabilizing agreements by sweat-shop units of industry.

THREE PLANS READY

The three alternative plans for putting a weapon into the hands of the government were:

1. A broad processing or occupancy tax, to be imposed against an entire industry, with exemptions granted to each unit conforming to the stabilization agreement.
2. A federal licensing of all industries, with revocation of the licenses of any units violating the stabilization agreement.
3. Expansion of the "unfair practice" provision of the anti-trust laws, to include violations of the proposed stabilization agreements, and criminal prosecution.

On the question of financing the huge public works program, the president faced a choice of:

1. Imposing a small general sales tax on all industrial products, with farm products exempted;
2. A tax on tea and coffee, and perhaps a few other excise taxes added, or;
3. A small payroll tax, with no exemptions.

The main provisions for stabilizing industry were agreed upon by

ESCAPE IN HILLS

Question Suspects When Found in Dewey Park

Peace officers of six central and southern Ohio counties, Friday, were searching for two youthful jail-break suspects who traded revolver shots with Deputy Karl Radcliff, Thursday afternoon.

Two shots were fired at Radcliff, a brother of Sheriff Charles Radcliff, and he in turn fired two shots from his .38 Colt's special revolver. The latter of Radcliff's shots shattered the rear window of the blue Chevrolet coupe driven by the men. They fled after this shot.

The shot-trading came after the men tried to flee when the deputy ordered them to drive into this city for questioning.

PARKED AT DEWEY

He was "cruising" when he observed their Chevrolet coupe parked behind the bath house at Dewey park on Route 104. Radcliff went to the automobile and found both men sleeping. He awakened them and, because they acted very suspiciously, he ordered them from the automobile and searched them. He then searched the automobile and found a small portion of alleged whiskey in a pint bottle. A 5-gallon gasoline can and a long syphon were also found by the deputy but no trace of a revolver was disclosed.

He ordered the two men to drive into Circleville for questioning and said that if they could give a good account of themselves they would be freed.

"They got in their automobile," Deputy Radcliff said, "and I entered the De Soto coupe to follow them. I instructed them to turn to the left on Route 56 but instead of turning the way I told them, they speeded their car and turned to the right.

SAW REVOLVER

"When I made the turn I saw one of the men spring from the car with a revolver in his hand. I slid down in the coupe and pulled the emergency brake then slid out of the door, pulling my revolver. As I peered around the side of the machine he shot at me and I shot back. Neither of us hit. He shot again and since I could see only his arm I shot at the driver in the machine. I broke the windshield with my shot and they sped away."

Radcliff started to chase the men and with his tank full of gasoline and a good car thought he could catch them. Then "his coupe started to 'buck.' The deputy drove to the Bob Walters farm and borrowed Walter's Buick car and hurried into Five Points where he learned the suspects had turned south toward Crownover's mill just five minutes before he arrived there.

Driving to the mill Radcliff learned the men had passed there and he called New Holland and Washington C. H. to watch for the men. Walters' machine began to "buck" and Radcliff had Frank Price, who was at the Miss Anna Florence farm near the mill, take him in his Hupmobile roadster.

The suspects evaded the officers somewhere in the vicinity of Crownover's.

OTHERS IN SEARCH

Radcliff, with Price, then went into Washington C. H. and officers there began to search. Thursday night the deputy with Deputy Bryan Custer searched all over the county. Morris Boggs, Joe Adkins Jr., and Franklin Price drove over several counties and Sheriff Charles Radcliff, Officer Will McCrady and Deputy Bob Armstrong continued the search.

Upon investigation and comparison of descriptions it was decided that the men with whom Radcliff had his fracas were two who sawed their way from the Highland-co jail at Hillsboro two weeks ago. The automobile they were driving was identified as that stolen from Krell Bennington at Winchester, Adams-co. Two youths

Cummings Drives "Boyle Special"

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 12.—The fastest bundle boy in Indianapolis has one more package to deliver—and he hopes it is the bacon.

William Cummings who will drive a car in the 500-mile race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, May 30, began his speeding antics rushing last minute dinner tidbits, forgotten by bridge playing wives. And there wasn't a single divorce caused by non delivery of food along Cummings' route.

Of course when the day's work was done and the last can of salmon had been hurried to a frantic wife whose spouse was hungrily rounding the corner on his last lap to the fireside, Cummings used to peek over the fence and watch the race drivers practice their speeding laps at the Indianapolis Speedway.

Cummings will drive the Boyle Valve Special which sat on the pole at the start of last year's contest. The car didn't finish the race. It will be even faster than the 117 miles an hour that won the pole position last year. And Cummings hopes he can nursemaid it the whole distance this year.

LIGHTS ON STATE ROADS TOTAL 426

Traffic lights located on Ohio's state highway system total 426, according to a state-wide survey just completed. Highway Director O. W. Merrell announced today. The survey, begun in July, 1932, includes those traffic lights located on state highways in villages (municipalities of less than 5,000 population).

The majority of signals now operating on state highways are unauthorized, Merrell announced. The Highway Department has authorized erection of only 167 signals, comprising but 39 per cent of the total signals now in operation. There are 259 signals, or 61 per cent, operating without authorization by the Highway Director, whose approval is necessary to make it lawful for a village to erect or maintain traffic lights upon an extension of the state highway system within the village.

Of the total number of signals erected, 372 are located within the corporate limits of municipalities, 26 in unincorporated villages and 28 at isolated intersections. Counties have erected 39 signals, or 9.1 per cent, and townships 15 signals, or 3.6 per cent, of the total number of traffic signals on state highways.

EAT MORE GREENS

Eat greens. In the springtime eat more greens. When you were a child they gave you sulphur and molasses, but now they say eat greens.
It is for good reasons, says the Bureau of Home Economics of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, that nutrition specialists harp so much on greens. In the green leaves of the dandelion, of mustard, of dock, or other wild greens, in the green tops of turnips and beets, as well as in kale, collards, spinach, lettuce, Swiss chard, or green cabbage, are found food materials which are absolutely essential to good health. These green leaves are rich in minerals and vitamins. Particularly they are rich in calcium and iron, and in vitamins A and C. They are good sources also of vitamins B. and C. They are good sources also of vitamins B and G. They rank at the top of the list as protective foods.

In winter, such root vegetables as carrots, sweetpotatoes, and Irish potatoes furnish some of these protective food materials. And there are canned tomatoes and green cabbage all the year round. But greens in the usual sense—cooked—greens—are associated in many minds with the spring of the year, doubtless because, in the colder climates, and down until our times, there were no greens to be had in winter. Anyway, there is a special satisfaction in the fresh green things we can cut for ourselves, in field, fence-row, or garden patch.

And most people do not eat greens enough—indeed, many people do not eat vegetables enough in winter. That is another reason for urging them to eat greens in the spring, when they may be feeling the effects of a scarcity of greens in winter. It is also a reason why families who can have a garden should plan to have greens growing as much of the year as possible.

Raw greens, however, are richer in vitamins than cooked greens, richer because cooking destroys two vitamins, B and C, and because the juices, which contain the water-soluble mineral salts, cannot escape when the leaves are eaten raw. Therefore, says the nutritionist again, eat plenty of raw green cabbage, plenty of green lettuce, and you can even eat raw spinach. In any case, never cook greens long—though the harsher leaves like kale, require more cooking than others. As a rule, however, cook greens just enough to wilt them—they taste better then, anyway.

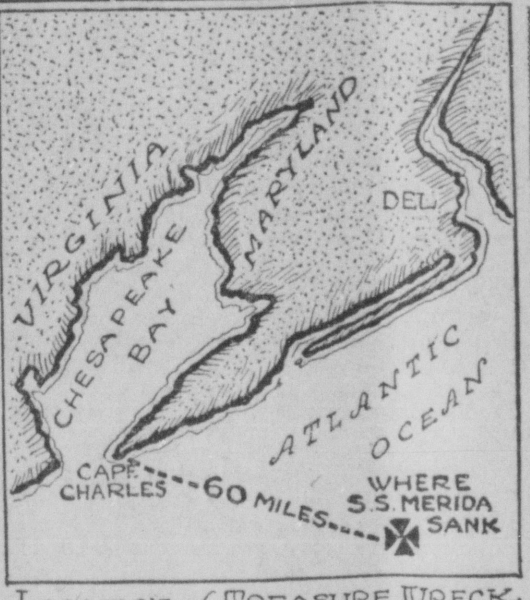

If you doubt this, try it. Put the greens in a kettle, with very little water—for spinach and dandelions, no water at all except what clings to the leaves after washing. Don't put the lid on the kettle—cooking greens covered spoils the fresh green color. Let them heat for a few minutes, stirring occasionally until they are just wilted. Then chop and serve with salt pork or bacon fat for seasoning, or with lemon juice or vinegar, salt and pepper.

Two Expeditions Claim Merida Treasure

U. S. Navy Called In to Avert Clash Between Rival Salvagers of $6,000,000 Sunken Hoard. "Royal" Fishmonger in London Also in Lists.

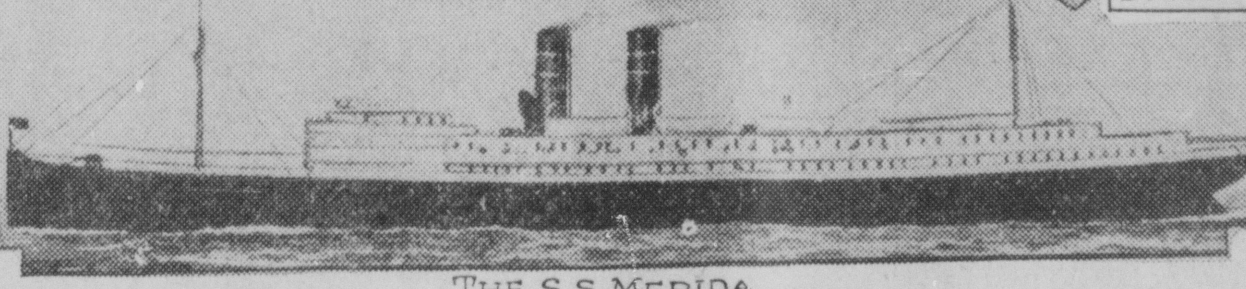

BILL BRIGHTWELL

LOCATION OF TREASURE WRECK

CAPT. H. L. BOWDOIN

THE S.S. MERIDA

With the reported discovery of the sunken liner Merida, sixty miles off the Virginia Capes, the trouble entailed by 22 years of seeking it is as nothing to what appears to be brewing now that it is found. In the first place, two rival expeditions, one headed by Captain H. L. Bowdoin, of Norfolk, Va., the other by Captain John Hall, of Gloucester, Mass., claim priority rights, both insisting their expedition was first to locate the wreck. A situation that might have developed into a miniature naval battle was averted by the intervention of the U. S. destroyer Davis, which hurried to the scene of the treasure-hunt and is acting in the role of peacemaker. The wreck of the Merida, which sank after a collision in 1911, is said to contain jewels and gold, variously estimated at between four and six million dollars. Chief among the sunken valuables are the crown jewels of the executed Emperor Maximilian of Mexico, which brings us to Bill Brightwell. Bill, a London fishmonger, claims that he is the son and heir of the Mexican Emperor. What's more, he has the Hapsburg lip to prove it. Soon after Captain Bowdoin began his search for the Merida's more, the royal fishmonger's lawyer served notice that if and when the treasure is recovered, his client intends to lay claim to "any or all of the estate of his father that may be found in the wreck." Brightwell asserts that, at the proper time, he can prove his parentage. All of which must be rather disturbing to the men who are risking their lives in the battle with Father Neptune for a treasure of which the alleged Hapsburg, without wetting his fingers, may take the lion's share.

For Panned Greens, first crisp

salt pork or bacon in the pan, then put in the greens and turn them over and over until they are wilted in the hot salt fat. Green cabbage, cut in half-inch ribbons, and heated until just tender but still crisp is particularly good in this way. Some of the harsher greens, such as kale, may need to be covered to decrease cooking time.

Greens wilted in hot, cooked salad dressing makes another interesting dish. And, of course, there are creamed greens, such as turnips tops or kale or spinach, chopped, cooked a few minutes, and served in white sauce.

A salad of mixed greens—crisp raw lettuce, parsley, cress, shredded green cabbage, served with French dressing, is another attractive and useful addition to the commonplace meal of bread, meat, and potatoes.

RECIPES

Spinach in Milk

2 pounds spinach.
2 tablespoons butter.
1 cup top milk.
1-2 teaspoon salt.
Wash the spinach thoroughly in running water until free from grit. Press the spinach into a saucepan, add a very small quantity of water, or cover the pan and cook for about 10 minutes, or until wilted, and stir the spinach occasionally so that it cooks evenly. Chop the spinach fine. Melt the fat in a saucepan, add the top milk and salt, and when hot add the chopped spinach, and simmer for a few minutes longer. Add more salt if needed, and serve at once.

Panned Kale

Strip the kale from the midribs and discard them and the stringy portions. Wash the kale thoroughly in several waters, drain, and cut it into small pieces. For each quart of kale allow 2 tablespoons butter or other fat. Melt the fat in a skillet, add the kale, cover to keep in the steam, and cook slowly for 15 to 20 minutes. Sift a teaspoon of flour over the kale, mix well, pour in one-half cup of milk, and stir until thickened. Season with salt and pepper and serve at once.

Savory Mixed Greens

Combine two or more kinds of greens, such as beet and turnip tops, field cress and spinach, or greens, salad and mustard greens, to give a blend of mild and pungent flavors. Wash the greens through several salted boiling water. As soon as the greens are tender, chop. Season with bacon fat and sprinkle over the top a little crisp cooked bacon broken into small pieces. Or cook a little chopped onion in fat until both fat and onion brown slightly, mix with the chopped greens, and add salt and pepper to taste.

Braised Lettuce

2 large hard heads iceberg lettuce.
4 tablespoons bacon fat.
Salt.
Pepper.
Cut each head of lettuce into 4 pieces, taking care that a portion of the center stem is left on each section to hold the leaves together. Heat the fat in a large skillet, put in the lettuce, cover, and cook for about 30 minutes, or until the lettuce is tender. Turn carefully if necessary. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and serve on a hot platter.

State Refuses To Assist "People's Relief March"

The so-called People's State Relief March, planning to reach Columbus on May 23 for an appeal to the legislature for more aid, received an abrupt set-back Thursday when Adj. Gen. Frank Henderson advised leaders of the move that they can expect no assistance from state or local political subdivisions during their trek.

Henderson's statement left the leaders in a quandry. It is reported, as they expected—and even demanded—food, shelter and medical attention from each city or town through which they passed.

Seven lines of march are planned by the group named the State Action Committee and headed by A. R. Onda, Cleveland. One of the lines is scheduled to leave Portsmouth on May 19, to pass through Waverly and Chillicothe and to pass through this city on May 21 or 22.

Onda's demand for assistance through this county received a flat turn-down by the county commissioners who have a relief problem of their own to face. City council took similar action although not in the form of a denial. A communication was read to council and a motion to receive it was passed. That's all the action council took but it was significant of refusal to allow any food, shelter or medical aid as demanded.

The plans of the group include a day's rest in this city.

Other lines of march are scheduled to start from Conneaut, Cleveland, Toledo, East Liverpool, Cincinnati and Athens.

answering the same description held him up at the point of a revolver a few days ago. The car was a Chevrolet coupe, blue, 1930 or 31, six cylinder.

The license tags it bore were also stolen. They were numbered 101-581 and were taken from the machine of Lon Brooks, Manchester, R. F. D. 3.

Names given to officers by Highland-co authorities were Carter and Carothers but the men who traded shots with Radcliff did not give their names.

DESCRIBE MEN

The deputy sheriff described them as being about 22 years of age. The man who fired the shots was dark complexioned, was slender and wore a dark suit. The automobile driver was red-faced and had sandy hair. He also had crooked teeth with several gold teeth in his mouth. He wore checkered trousers, Radcliff said.

A report of the shooting and a description of the men and their car were broadcast over the Columbus police radio Thursday night.

Later in the night, Deputies Radcliff and Custer went to Lockbourne to investigate the theft of a Ford automobile of John White, Canal Winchester R. F. D. 2, bearing license plates numbered H-1879.

Besides officers of this county members of Highland, Ross, Fayette, Madison and Franklin-co were watching their highways for the suspects Friday.

THE CHALLENGE OF LOVE
by WARWICK DEEPIING

SYNOPSIS
The smug little town of Navestock, contented to jog along in a rut, resenting the interference of anyone who sought to change its mode of living. The people, therefore, were very antagonistic toward young Dr. John Wolfe, assistant to the town's blundering old Dr. Threadgold, when he tried to better conditions. Wolfe, stunned at the unsanitary conditions he finds everywhere, prepares a map showing the unhealthy districts. Mrs. Threadgold comes upon the map and considering Wolfe's researches "gross disloyalty and underhand spying," suggests that he be warned to discontinue or be discharged. Wolfe's one inducement to keep fighting is the friendship and encouragement of lovely and vivacious Jess Mascal. Wolfe shows Dr. Threadgold the dangerous germs he found in the well-water of a house where there is a case of diphtheria. The narrow-minded Threadgold, afraid to face facts and fearing Wolfe may usurp his position, resents the younger man's "interference." Wolfe warns of a terrible calamity should typhoid fever or cholera strike Navestock. Not wishing to appear superior, Wolfe turns over his findings to Threadgold to do with as he pleases. Later, the old doctor tells his wife a convincing tale of how he put Wolfe in his place. She urges him to burn Wolfe's papers. Discouraged and longing for someone to talk to, Wolfe visits Jess, who urges him to stay and fight. Then, gazing into each other's eyes, they are strangely embarrassed. Josiah Crabbe, the one inhabitant of Navestock who has the courage to live up to his convictions and is hated for it, is keenly interested in Wolfe.

CHAPTER TWENTY-NINE
It happened that week that Dr. Threadgold received a number of personal calls from various influential men in Navestock. They did not come to consult him about their health, nor did they confess that they were perturbed about their pockets. They came one at a time and at intervals of a day or so, to sit in Dr. Threadgold's capacious leather chair, and lodge complaints, each after his fashion.
Old Hubbard, grocer and haberdasher, was the first, with his head like a big white bladder of lard. He was nervous and a little apologetic, and perspired excuses and explanations, and commented on the heat.
"You must really excuse me, Dr. Threadgold, sir, but I really can't put up with it any longer. Here's this young man of yours making my tenants grumble, sir, and setting people talking. Of course if you, sir, like to suggest any alterations in those cottages of mine, sir, that's a very different matter. I should be proud, sir, and obliged. But this inquisitive, masterful young man, sir, I really can't put up with it."

Two more tradesmen followed. Mr. Hubbard—Butler, the butcher, whose slaughter-house was an abomination; and Harrington, the dairyman, who kept four cows in a dirty stable at the back of his house in Bridge Street.
"Come down yourself, sir, and look over my place. Why, it was clean whitewashed all through last month. I'm not going to have this chap of yours sniffing round my premises. He ain't got the ways and manners of a gentleman."
Later in the week Mr. Zachary Wilks strolled in and treated Threadgold to a quarter of an hour's thin cynicism. Wilks was a little, acid man, who had a knack of setting people's teeth on edge.
"My dear Threadgold, I thought I should like to ask you whether you hold yourself responsible for all the ingenious inquisitiveness of this assistant of yours. Really, a most pushing and enthusiastic young man. Expect to find him in my scullery any day. Of course, if he has your instructions I have nothing more to say. But I don't like it. I don't pretend to like it. It will spoil our good feeling, you know. One does not like to quarrel with a man who has brought all one's youngsters into the world."

Jasper Turrell followed these lesser men, reserving his thunder until the last.
"Look here, Threadgold, we have known each other a good many years: what do you mean by inflicting us with a meddlesome cub like this chap Wolfe? I don't take it kindly. What's more, I'm not going to stand it. If you can't show your old friends and patients a little more consideration, confound it, we shall go elsewhere for our physic."

These successive attacks had worked Montage Threadgold into a state of intense irritability. He was furious with Wolfe, and with a weak man's fury that bubbles and chafes in the pot of its own cowardice, Turrell's bullying tone brought the little man to boiling-point.
"Let me tell you, Mr. Turrell, that this young man has caused me infinite irritation. There is no need for any gentleman in Navestock to dictate to me. I have tried patience and advice, but without result. Mr. Wolfe is going."

"Then you are a wise man, Threadgold. The fellow is doing you a great deal of harm."
"My dear sir, I know."
"He will smash up your practice if you keep him another six months."
The brewer left Threadgold in a state of simmering excitement. He rushed upstairs, hesitated, rushed down again, ascended once more, and burst into the drawing-room, where his wife sat reading at one of the windows.
"Sophia, I can stand this no longer. I'm not going to have Wolfe here another day."

"My dear Montague, don't get so excited about a mere jackanapes!"
"I hate and loathe the very sound of his name."
"Then do what I tell you; get rid of him at once."
"Exactly—quite so. And as to those papers of his—"

"What! You haven't burned them yet?"
"No."
"Bring them up here. I'll see that it does."

The Tower of London
What is commonly known as the Tower of London is really a group of buildings, ramparts, walls, towers and gates, standing on high ground about a half mile below London bridge, commanding the Thames from St. Saviour's creek to St. Olave's wharf. The names of two great architects or builders are associated with the construction of its principal piles, the one a Benedictine monk, known as Gundulf, the Weeper, the other an English king, Henry III.

Bad Posture a Cause of Frequent Ankle Sprains
If You Are Subject to This Painful Condition Don't Neglect It, and See if You Are Walking Correctly

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City

DURING the winter months when pavements and roads are wet and slippery, sprained ankle is a common accident. Even when snow and ice have long disappeared sprained ankle continues to be an everyday occurrence.

Some persons seem to be susceptible to this accident. This may be explained by individual weakness of the muscles, joints and ligaments of the ankle. The accident may occur because of carelessness in walking, or the wearing of shoes with little support to the ankle. It is a common complaint of women who have weak ankles yet wear high heels because of the dictates of "Dance Fashion."

I am often asked what is the difference between a "wrench" and a "sprain." There is really no difference. A sprain is a wrenched joint caused by a sudden twist or pull. It is an extremely painful affliction. At times the pain is so severe that complete rest in bed is necessary for its relief.

Be Careful of Permanent Injury
A mild sprain may allow the individual to hobble about with the aid of a cane. Too often a more serious injury of the ankle is mistaken for a wrench or sprain. For example, a person may injure his ankle, complain of pain and ignore the accident. He calls it a sprain and continues to walk on the injured ankle. If neglected, permanent injury and deformity may occur.

Persistent pain in the ankle demands expert attention. Merely because you can move your ankle and stand on your foot does not mean that the bone is not broken. Whenever in doubt, an X-ray picture of the injured ankle should be taken.

Mourning Cloak Lives on Sap
The mourning cloak, that sturdy butterfly that comes forth from its winter's hibernation in a woodpile or similarly protected spot very early in the spring, feeds upon the exuding sap of trees before the flowers come. The same butterfly lingers long after the most of the flowers are gone in the fall, and then it finds the juices of decaying fruits such as apples to its liking.

A Woman's Revolution

ADOLPH HITLER, German dictator, is facing his greatest test.

It is not the Jews or communists or other political elements who will supply it.

It is the women of Germany, the fraus and frauens who believe they are entitled to a share in the "new deal" in Germany, and they are preparing to demand it. Proof of their determination to get it is seen in the fearlessness of their spokesmen in outlining their aims.

The uplifted Nazi fist has silenced most opposition elements in Germany. But, if Frau Katharina von Oheim-Kardorff is a representative example, there is to be no shrinking on the part of the women. Frau von Oheim-Kardorff is head of the National Women's association. She has other claims to prominence. She has sat in the reichstag as a deputy. She is the wife of a former vice president of that legislative body.

Is she afraid to voice her thoughts as a representative of her sex at a time when Herr Hitler demands silence on the part of all except those who agree with him? Not much. And there is the ring of determination in her words. She doesn't hesitate to criticize openly the Nazi program. The women of Germany, she declares, have two main objections to it. Its complete exclusion of women from all governmental and professional activities and its "senseless treatment of the racial question" are things that her sex will not stand for, she declares.

How do the women propose to correct them? By forming their own political party in opposition to the government—and, remember, the women still have a majority of 2,000,000 in this country," she warns the National Socialists.

There are 11,000,000 self-supporting women in Germany, says Frau von Oheim-Kardorff, and 78 per cent of all the agricultural work is done by women. "These women have been free and independent for 16 years," she adds. "They are not going to stand for suddenly being deprived of all rights while their duties remain."

What will be the outcome of the women's rebellion is an interesting question. German women, their spokesmen says, are "more disputatious than the women of either England or America, and they will gain their ends."

Getting Married Now

HARD times appear to have considerably reduced the number of marriages. Many prudent young people shrink from accepting these responsibilities in times like these. But now that business indications have taken a decided upturn, now that prices are rising and a new wave of confidence is felt, one can expect a good number of June weddings this year.

Little Cupid, who had been looking sad, shows signs of cheering up.

How far is it wise and prudent for young people to marry, at times when business and working conditions are still somewhat uncertain? They should not usually undertake it at any time, unless one or both of them has a regular job, unless they have some reserve of savings, or unless they are sure of some kind of help in emergencies.

Marriages postponed too long often fail to come out so well. It is a natural thing for young people to marry at a fairly early age, and conditions are most favorable then for developing loyal attachment and bringing up a healthy family. They do well to take the advice of parents and other older friends. It is amazing how some youngsters will rush into matrimony at very early ages, without any idea where the money is coming from for their support, or for the children that may come. They don't seem to worry more about the future than do the birds building their nests. But when industrious young folks marry, they can have the feeling that somehow the way will open for them to make good.

Cat Goes 44 Miles to Reach Old Home

Mount Vernon, Iowa—Earl Beach and his family moved from here to a farm near South Bethel, a distance of about 44 miles, taking with them six cats.

To prevent them from straying, Beach put them in the basement the first evening in the new home. Next morning there were only five cats.

A few days later Beach returned to Mount Vernon on business. At his former residence he was greeted by a small, badly bedraggled cat, which evidently had just completed a 44-mile journey back to its old home.

Summary of the sensational RKO-Radio Melodramatic Fantasy Produced by Merian C. Cooper and Ernest B. Schoedsack. Shown at the Cliftona Theatre, Sunday, Monday, Tuesday, May 14, 15, 16

Ann in his arms again, "King Kong" rips up a section of elevated track and a train crashes to destruction. He leaves a trail of horrible death and terror. A great city is alarmed as never before. All forces of the police department are called into play, but how can puny bullets wound a body that has survived for millions of years?

"King Kong" has always lived at the top of a mountain. He wants a mountain now and these man-made peaks are amazingly easy to climb, though his captive thinks any moment her heart must stop beating. Surely there is a limit to the amount of terror she can endure. She can see not a chance in the world for her rescue now.

On the topmost peak, like the Pterodactyl on Skull Island come flying things at "King Kong." He thrusts out a fist and a bombing plane crashes into splinters! He grabs another in his fist—more wreckage! Thousands of bullets are being pumped into his giant body—is it possible he is deathless?

A heart that has beat for millions of years at last gives up, full of lead. With one last drumming of his chest and a mighty roar, "King Kong" falls to the street, a thousand feet below! Ann is snatched from the dizzy parapet by her sweetheart, Driscoll.

GARDEN CLUB HEARS INTERESTING TALKS

A large attendance enjoyed a most delightful program at the regular meeting of the Pickaway-co Garden club Thursday evening in the Monday club rooms.

A short business session preceded the program. A field trip called a "Mystery trip" with the destination unknown except by the leader Leslie Pontius, was planned for Sunday, May 21.

Mack Noggle, who is rapidly becoming an authority in that line gave a most interesting talk on "Tropical Fish," their care, propagation and special characteristics. Mr. Noggle used specimens of his own fish in aquariums with which to illustrate.

Ray Dietz, of Columbus, spoke on "Maintenance." He impressed his listeners with the fact that it takes not only beautiful flowers but a well kept lawn and clean driveways and walks to make a really beautiful garden. He carefully explained how to trim shrubs and what shrubs to choose for the small yard; how to rid oneself of insect pests; the right kind of grass seed to plant; how to care for the lawn and trees and how to make a pool.

The fact that a water garden and rock garden are not one and the same thing but something very different was especially stressed.

All together a most instructive talk was enjoyed by every member present.

and Farley at last has agreed to "deal."

A Democratic civil service commission will step in today Farley promised them, and this will pave the way for a general lifting of the moratorium on political plums. With the inauguration of this program, there was a distinct feeling of uneasiness on the part of those insurgents who have failed to back the President in his program. It is known that the bosses of the House have scanned copies of each important roll call. Those who have jumped the fence too often may find themselves without the pull to get jobs for their constituents.

Farley told them frankly that the jobs were going to be given to "deserving Democrats" and "those Republicans who helped us." He said the administration was going to move in such fashion in the matter of patronage that "the victory of last fall will be made permanent."

When Farley finished, 300 fervently grateful congressmen passed before him and wrung his hand.

the president's advisers. They called for voluntary trade agreements to be negotiated by each industry and touch working hours, minimum wages, child labor, competition price wars or fixing minimum sales prices. A federal business control board would be created to protect the public, suspend anti-trust laws and enforce the agreements.

The crux of the plan was enforcement of the agreements against recalcitrant industrial units. The president's congressional advisers were divided over the three plans but Mr. Roosevelt was reported to favor a processing or occupational tax, which could be imposed against an industry as a whole, with exemption of those units abiding by the fair trade agreement. This plan therefore was written into a draft of the proposed legislation sent to him for his approval, along with drafts of the alternative enforcement plans.

WORKS PLAN SETTLED

The public works program appeared settled too, except for the method of financing a $3,300,000,000 bond issue. The administration was committed to raise $220,000,000 a year to amortize this bond issue within 20 years, not through general taxation, but by some specific plan of raising new earmarked revenue. The president leaned toward a small industrial sales tax to be called a "reemployment tax." This plan had the endorsement of the American Federation of Labor, providing the proceeds of the bond issue would be used exclusively to provide jobs.

The alternative plans—to tax tea and coffee and to impose a small tax on pay envelopes—were submitted to him by his advisers.

The theory behind industrial sales tax and payroll levy was that the entire $3,300,000,000 bond issue would be used to create jobs and increase purchasing power.

The payroll tax, if adopted, would be levied on top of regular income taxes but would be collected monthly. The rate might be as low as 1-4 of one percent.

The American federation of labor endorsed the "reemployment tax" in the form of a small industrial sales tax at a recent white house conference. President William Green told Mr. Roosevelt organized labor was ready to accept such a tax in order to provide jobs.

F. D. STUDYING TWO FEATURES

How To Finance Extensive Public Works Program Is 'Fly In Ointment.'

WASHINGTON, May 12.—The administration's plan for recapturing prosperity by stabilization of industry and a huge public works program, was before President Roosevelt today for a decision on two vital features.

The president faced the problem of determining how to enforce fair trade agreements on industry and how to finance a $3,300,000,000 public works program. Three alternative plans were submitted.

The most important decision involved the issue of compelling acceptance of stabilizing agreements by threat-shop units of industry.

THREE PLANS READY

The three alternative plans for putting a weapon into the hands of the government were:

1. A broad processing or handling tax to be imposed against an entire industry, with exemptions granted to each unit conforming to the stabilization agreement.

2. A federal licensing of all industries, with revocation of the license of any unit violating the stabilization agreement.

3. Expansion of the "unfair practice" provision of the anti-trust laws, to include violations of the proposed stabilization agreements, and criminal prosecution.

On the question of financing the huge public works program, the president faced a choice of:

1. Imposing a small general sales tax on all industrial products, with farm products exempted;

2. A tax on tea and coffee, with perhaps a few other excise taxes added, or;

3. A small payroll tax, with no exemptions.

The main provisions for stabilizing industry were agreed upon by Continued On Page Six

FARLEY READY TO GIVE JOBS

Process of Eliminating Republican Job Holders Begins Today.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—The process of decapitating incumbent postmasters, district attorneys, collectors of internal revenue and holders of lesser government job holders will begin today. This was promised to 300 job hungry Democratic House members last night by James A. Farley, postmaster general and patronage chief of the new administration.

Chafing under the pressure from back home because Republicans have continued to draw government salaries for more than two months since the beginning of "the new deal," scores of Democrats in Congress have been pressing Farley for a showdown (Continued on Page Six)

Administration Also Studying Request for Solution of Bonus

JOB OFFER IS SEEN

25,000 Veterans May Get Camp Jobs

WASHINGTON, May 12.—President Roosevelt today signed farm relief-inflationary bill, described by most authorities as the greatest single piece of economic legislation ever enacted by an American congress.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—A broad program of aid to needy veterans was being developed by the administration today as demands for cash payment of the $2,200,000,000 soldiers' bonus grew in the house, and revolt was threatened against the veterans economy act.

The recruiting of 25,000 veterans in the reforestation camps on the order of President Roosevelt was declared by congressional members of the "veterans bloc" to be only the beginning of the program.

Specific consideration of the needs of veterans in the administration of the half-billion dollar Wagner bill and preferential treatment in the development of a vast public works program were being considered.

BONUS STUDIED

The administration also was considering the plea of a house delegation to devise means of paying the soldiers' bonus or increasing the loan value for veterans in dire circumstances.

With a petition signed by 26 members of the house lying on the speaker's desk for discharge of the Ways and Means committee from consideration of the cash bonus bill, Democratic house leaders have informed the president there is a possibility of the house revolting and demanding payment.

The administration emerged victorious in the house late yesterday when attempts were made to wreck the $460,000,000 veterans reductions made in the independent offices bill, carrying out the economy act voted at the beginning of the session.

While the house added $8,000,000 to maintain regional veterans' offices, it refused to make further additions. A final vote was slated for today.

FUNDS ARE CUT

As the measure approached final passage, the veterans bureau funds are cut $452,000,000 for next year.

Rep. Woodrum (D) of Virginia, in charge of the bill, apparently averted a real revolt in the house by appealing to the members to give the president a chance to liberalize the economy act.

Charles Doughton (D) of the house ways and means committee, after a conference at the White House, indicated the bonus veterans now in Washington would be denied a hearing on the bill providing for cash payment.

Rep. Lundeen (F-L) of Minnesota, sponsor of the petition to discharge the ways and means committee, said he would "open up" on members of the house pledged to payment of the bonus unless they fall in line.

Great Amount of Drift Is Washed Loose North of City; Saltcreek Falls.

The Scioto river, Friday morning, had reached the 11.9-foot stage and was still rising at noon, Dr. H. R. Clarke, weather observer, announced.

He expected the river to inundate the Williamsport-pk before the close of the day.

"An amazing amount of drift," Dr. Clarke said, "is floating down the river showing that the flood has reached new heights north of this county."

In the meantime highway employees reported that Saltcreek had fallen after covering Route 56 north of Laureville and that traffic is now proceeding over the route.

Thursday's temperature reached 81 degrees and Friday promised to go higher than that.

Numerous highways in four counties were covered with water, slowing up automobile traffic. Cellars of residences and business buildings in riverfront cities were flooded.

O. W. McNeil, state highway director, reported at least seven highways in middlewestern counties were flooded, but damage could not be determined accurately today. Roads covered with water in Darke, Miami, Clarke, and Shelby counties.

Woman Jailed On Habitual Charge

Myrtle Moore Sentenced To Workhouse For One to Three Years by Mayor.

Pleading guilty to intoxication on May 5, Myrtle Moore, local character, was sentenced to the Columbus workhouse for one to three years by Mayor B. T. Hedges, Friday morning.

Miss Moore's plea was made to an affidavit charging her with being an habitual offender.

She was arrested by deputy sheriffs after she struck Charles Freley on the head with a lamp badly injuring him. Freley was fined $50 and costs and sent to the workhouse by the Mayor on charges of disorderly conduct and intoxication. He entered that place Thursday being taken by Sheriff Charles Radcliff and Deputy Bryan Custer.

The affidavit against Miss Moore, signed by Deputy Custer, cited that she was convicted and sentenced to the Marysville reformatory Oct. 21, 1927, for operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated serving a $100 fine and 30 days; that on Feb. 3, 1929, she was jailed for intoxication and disorderly conduct and served $100 and 30 days in the Marysville reformatory; that on Aug. 25, 1930, she was arrested for intoxication and fined $100 and costs and sent to the Cincinnati workhouse.

Other counts against Miss Moore were not listed in the affidavit as only three are necessary to warrant a charge of being an habitual offender.

Boy Found Guilty of Second Degree Murder of 12-Year-Old Whom He Stabbed To Death; Takes Decision Stoically While Mother Faints.

NEW YORK, May 12.—Found guilty of second degree murder for the killing of 12-year-old Willie Bender, a mandatory prison sentence of 20 years to life awaited 15-year-old Harry Murch, New York's "legal infant," today.

The verdict was returned by a jury of 12 men, 10 of whom were fathers, after five hours' deliberation. Sentence will be pronounced on May 19 by Judge Thomas Downs, who presided at the trial.

SHOWS NO DISMAY

In keeping with his conduct throughout the trial, young Murch took the verdict stoically. He exhibited neither joy at his escape from the electric chair, to which he would have had to be sentenced if a first degree murder verdict had been returned, nor dismay at the prospect of spending the next 20 years of his life behind prison bars.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Murch, were not in the courtroom when the verdict was returned. Mrs. Murch fainted from the long strain to which she had been exposed during the trial just as the report reached the courtroom that the jury had agreed upon a verdict. Mr. Murch and a number of friends carried her outside to revive her while the jury was filing into the jury box.

CHARGE NOT DENIED

Young Murch was convicted of stabbing to death the Bender boy last Jan. 31, after blinding, gagging and blinding him. His counsel did not deny the charge, but insisted that the Bender boy had been stabbed to death by "a boy over whom Harry Murch had no control."

ATTEMPT TO ENTER SAFE FRUSTRATED

An attempt to "crack" the safe of the Kruger store in Williamsport was frustrated early Friday when pedestrians who saw three men in the store caused an alarm.

Clarence Baker, store manager, called Sheriff Charles Radcliff after he had been informed there were men in the store but before the sheriff with Deputy Bob Armstrong could reach the village the men had disappeared.

Three or four boxes of crackers were believed stolen and the safe bore marks of an attempted "cracking."

CHILLICOTHE, May 12.—In response to demands of property owners, Fred L. Schlegel, county auditor, today, announced a 10 per cent reduction in real estate valuation in the county and city so that the tax value of real estate will more nearly conform to actual value.

The total saving in taxes to the county on the basis of the new rate which becomes effective at once will be $61,780.73 of which the city's share will amount to $23,953.80.

Officers of Several Counties Hunt Youth Charged by Karl Radcliff

ESCAPE IN HILLS

Question Suspects When Found in Dwey Park

Peace officers of six central and southern Ohio counties, Friday, were searching for two youthful jail-break suspects who traded revolver shots with Deputy Karl Radcliff, Thursday afternoon.

Two shots were fired at Radcliff, a brother of Sheriff Charles Radcliff, and he in turn fired three shots from his .38 Colt's revolver. The latter of the shots shattered the window of the blue Chevrolet driven by the men. They fled.

The shot-trading chase was men tried to flee when they were ordered them to drop their weapons for questioning.

PARKED AT DWEY

He was "cracking" when he served their Chevrolet, parked behind the bath house at Dwey park on Route 104. Radcliff went to the automobile and found both men sleeping. He awakened them and, because they acted very suspiciously, he searched them from the automobile. He found a long syringe and a portion of alleged whiskey in a pint bottle.

He found a long syringe and a portion of alleged whiskey in a pint bottle. He found a long syringe and a portion of alleged whiskey in a pint bottle.

He ordered the two men into Chillicothe for questioning and said that if they could not give a good account of themselves they would be freed.

"They got in their automobile," Deputy Radcliff said, "and I entered the De Soto coupe to get them. I instructed them to get out of the car and to get to the left at Route 58. When they turned the car around, they sped their car to the right."

SAW REVOLVER

"When I made the turn I saw one of the men spring from the car with a revolver in his hand and lay down in the coupe. I heard the emergency brake then, and out of the door, pulling my revolver. As I peered around the side of the machine he shot at me and I shot back. Neither of us was hurt again and since I could see only his arm I shot at the driver in the machine. I broke the windshield with my shot and they sped away."

Radcliff said he had a tank full of gasoline and a good car thought he could catch them. Then his coupe started to "buck." The deputy drove to the Bob Walters farm and borrowed Walter's Buick car and hurried into Five Points where he learned the suspects had turned south toward Crownover's mill just five minutes before he arrived there.

Driving to the mill Radcliff learned the men had passed there and he called New Holland and Washington C. H. to watch for the men. Walters' machine began to "buck" and Radcliff had Franklin Price, who was at the Miss Anna Florence farm near the mill, take him in his Humble roadster.

The suspects evaded the officers somewhere in the vicinity of Crownover's.

OTHERS IN SEARCH

Radcliff, with Price, then went into Washington C. H., and officers there began to search. Thursday night the deputy with Deputy Bryan Custer searched all over the county. Morris Boggs, Joe Adkins Jr., and Franklin Price drove over several counties and Sheriff Charles Radcliff, Officer W. Armstrong and Deputy Bob Armstrong continued the search.

Upon investigation and comparison of descriptions it was decided that the men with whom Radcliff had his fracas were two who saved their way from the Highland-co jail at Hillsboro two weeks ago. The automobile they were driving was identified as that stolen from Krell Bennington at Winchester, Adams-co. Two youths.

Cummings Drives "Boyle Special"

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 12.—
The fastest bundle boy in Indianapolis has one more package to deliver—and he hopes it is the bacon.

William Cummings who will drive a car in the 500-mile race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway,
May 30, began his speeding antics rushing last minute dinner tidbits, forgotten by bridge playing wives. And there wasn't a single divorce caused by non delivery of food along Cummings' route.

Of course when the day's work was done and the last can of salmon had been hurried to a frantic wife whose spouse was hungrily rounding the corner on his last lap to the fire, Cummings used to peek over the fence and watch the race drivers practice their speeding laps at the Indianapolis Speedway.

Cummings will drive the Boyle Valve Special which sat on the pole at the start of last year's contest. The car didn't finish the race.
It will be even faster than the 117 miles an hour that won the pole position last year. And Cummings hopes he can nursemaid it the whole distance this year.

Smiles at Threats

Although he has received many kidnap threats, Jockey Silvio Coucci, whose sensational riding has won him national fame, doesn't seem to be worrying much as he is pictured here at the Jamaica, L. I., track.
The pony pilot has hired armed guards to protect him even while mounting and dismounting at the paddock.

Greeting Before the Battle

Cliff Sutter (left), of the United States Davis Cup team, and Estaban Reyes, of the Mexican team, are shown engaging in the traditional handshake before the start of play in the first round of the Davis Cup play at Mexico City. Sutter defeated his Mexican opponent by a score of 6-1, 6-0, 6-1. The U. S. won every match of this tournament.

EAT MORE GREENS

Eat greens. In the springtime eat more greens. When you were a child they gave you sulphur and molasses, but now they say eat greens.
It is for good reasons, says the Bureau of Home Economics of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, that nutrition specialists harp so much on greens. In the green leaves of the dandelion, of mustard, of dock, or other wild greens, in the green tops of turnips and beets, as well as in kale, collards, spinach, lettuce, Swiss chard, or green cabbage, are found food materials which are absolutely essential to good health. These green leaves are all rich in minerals and vitamins. Particularly they are rich in calcium and iron, and in vitamins A and C. They are good sources also of vitamins B and C. They are good sources also of vitamins B and C. They rank at the top of the list as protective foods.

In winter, such root vegetables as carrots, sweet potatoes, and Irish potatoes furnish some of these protective food materials. And there are canned tomatoes and green cabbage all the year round. But greens in the usual sense—cooked greens—are associated in many minds with the spring of the year, doubtless because, in the colder climates and down until our times, there were no greens to be had in winter. Anyway, there is a special satisfaction, there were no greens to faction in the fresh green things we can cut for ourselves, in field, fence-row, or garden patch.

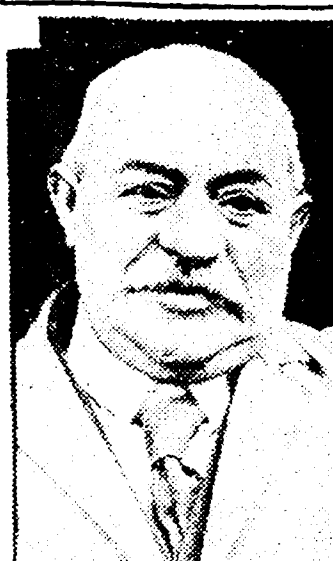

And most people do not eat greens enough—indeed, many people do not eat vegetables enough in winter. That is another reason for urging them to eat greens in the spring, when they may be feeling the effects of a scarcity of greens in winter. It is also a reason why families who can have a garden should plan to have greens growing as much of the year as possible.

Raw greens, however, are richer in vitamins than cooked greens—richer because cooking destroys two vitamins, B and C, and because the juices, which contain the water-soluble vitamins (B and C) and the soluble mineral salts, cannot escape when the leaves are eaten raw. Therefore, says the nutritionist again, eat plenty of raw green cabbage, plenty of green lettuce, and you can even eat raw spinach. In any case, never cook greens long—though the harsher leaves like kale, require more cooking than others. As a rule, however, cook greens just enough to wilt them—they taste better then, anyway.

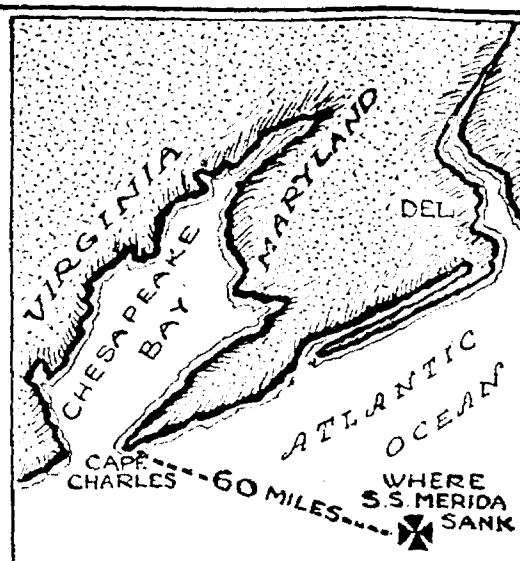

If you doubt this, try it. Put the greens in a kettle, with very little water—for spinach and dandelions, no water at all except what clings to the leaves after washing. Don't put the lid on the kettle—cooking greens covered spoils the fresh green color. Let them heat for a few minutes, stirring occasionally until they are just wilted. Then chop and serve with salt pork or bacon fat for seasoning, or with lemon juice or vinegar, salt and pepper.

Two Expeditions Claim Merida Treasure

U. S. Navy Called In to Avert Clash Between Rival Salvagers of $6,000,000 Sunken Hoard. "Royal" Fishmonger in London Also in Lists.

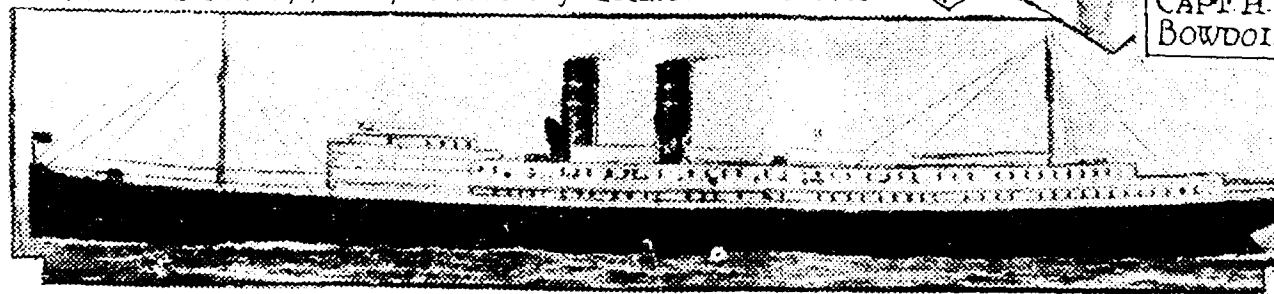

BILL BRIGHTWELL

LOCATION OF TREASURE WRECK

CAPT. H. L. BOWDOIN

THE S.S. MERIDA

With the reported discovery of the sunken liner Merida, sixty miles off the Virginia Capes, the trouble entailed by 22 years of seeking it as nothing to what appears to be brewing now that it is found. In the first place, two rival expeditions, one headed by Captain H. L. Bowdoin, of Norfolk, Va., the other by Captain John Hall, of Gloucester, Mass., claim priority rights, both insisting their expedition was first to locate the wreck. A situation that might have developed into a miniature naval battle was averted by the intervention of the U. S. destroyer Davis, which hurried to the scene of the treasure-hunt and is acting in the role of peacemaker. The wreck of the Merida, which sank after a collision in 1911, is said to contain jewels and gold, variously estimated at between four and six million dollars. Chief among the sunken valuables are the crown jewels of the executed Emperor Maximilian of Mexico, which brings us to Bill Brightwell, Bill, a London fishmonger, claims that he is the son and heir of the Mexican Emperor. What's more, he has the Hapsburg lip to prove it. Soon after Captain Bowdoin began his search for the Merida's treasure, the royal fishmonger's lawyer served notice that if and when the treasure is recovered, his client intends to lay claim to "any or all of the estate of his father that may be found in the wreck." Brightwell asserts that, at the proper time, he can prove his parentage. All of which must be rather disturbing to the men who are risking their lives in the battle with Father Neptune for a treasure of which the alleged Hapsburg, without wetting his fingers, may take the lion's share.

For panned greens, first crisp salt pork or bacon in the pan, then put in the greens and turn them over and over until they are wilted in the hot salt fat. Green cabbage, cut in half-inch ribbons, and heated until just tender but still crisp is particularly good in this way. Some of the harsher greens, such as kale, may need to be covered to decrease cooking time.

Greens wilted in hot, cooked salad dressing makes another interesting dish. And, of course, there are creamed greens, such as turnips tops or kale or spinach, chopped, cooked a few minutes, and served in white sauce. A salad of mixed greens—crisp raw lettuce, parsley, cross, shredded green cabbage, served with French dressing, is another attractive and useful addition to the commonplace meal of bread, meat, and potatoes.

2 pounds spinach.
2 tablespoons butter.
1 cup top milk.
1-2 teaspoon salt.
Wash the spinach thoroughly in running water until free from grit. Press the spinach into a saucepan, add a very small quantity of water, or cover the pan and cook the spinach in the water which clings to the leaves. Cook for about 10 minutes or until wilted and stir the spinach occasionally so that it cooks evenly. Chop the spinach fine. Melt the fat in a saucepan, add the top milk and salt, and when hot add the chopped spinach, and simmer for a few minutes longer. Add more salt if needed, and serve at once.

Panned Kale
Strip the kale from the midribs and discard them and the stringy portions. Wash the kale thoroughly in several waters, drain, and cut it into small pieces. For each quart of kale allow 2 tablespoons butter or other fat. Melt the fat in a skillet, add the kale, cover to keep in the steam, and cook slowly for 15 to 20 minutes. Sift a teaspoon of flour over the kale, mix well, pour in one-half cup of milk, and stir until thickened. Season with salt and pepper and serve at once.

Savory Mixed Greens
Combine two or more kinds of greens, such as beet and turnip tops, field cress and spinach, corn salad and mustard greens, to give a blend of mild and pungent flavors. Wash the greens through several salted boiling water. As soon as the greens are tender, chop. Season with bacon fat and sprinkle over the top a little crisp cooked bacon broken into small pieces. Or cook a little chopped onion in fat until hot, add oil and onion brown slightly, mix with the chopped greens, and add salt and pepper to taste.

Braised Lettuce
2 large hard heads iceberg lettuce.
4 tablespoons bacon fat.
Salt.
Pepper.
Cut each head of lettuce into 4 pieces, taking care that a portion of the center stem is left on each section to hold the leaves together. Heat the fat in a large skillet, put in the lettuce, cover, and cook for about 20 minutes, or until the lettuce is tender. Turn carefully if necessary. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and serve on a hot platter.

State Refuses To Assist "People's Relief March"

The so-called People's State Relief March, planning to reach Columbus on May 23 for an appeal to the legislature for more aid, received an abrupt set-back Thursday when Adj. Gen. Frank Henderson advised leaders of the move that they can expect no assistance from state or local political subdivisions during their trek.

Henderson's statement left the leaders in a quandry, it is reported, as they expected—and even demanded food, shelter and medical attention from each city or town through which they passed.

Seven lines of march are planned by the group named the State Action Committee and headed by A. R. Onda, Cleveland. One of the lines is scheduled to leave Portsmouth on May 19, to pass through Waverly and Chillicothe and to pass through this city on May 21 or 22.

Onda's demand for assistance through this county received a flat turn-down by the county commissioners, who have a relief problem of their own to face. City council took similar action although not in the form of a denial. A communication was read to council and a motion to receive it was passed. That's all the action council took but it was significant of refusal to allow any food, shelter or medical aid as demanded.

The vast of the group include a day's rest in this city. Other lines of march are scheduled to start from Conneaut, Cleveland, Toledo, East Liverpool, Cincinnati and Athens.

answering the same description held him up at the point of a revolver a few days ago. The car was a Chevrolet coupe, blue, 1930 or 31, six cylinder.

The license tags it bore were also stolen. They were numbered 101-581 and were taken from the machine of Lon Brooks, Manchester, R. F. D. 3.

Names given to officers by Highland-co authorities were Carter and Carothers but the men who traded shots with Radcliff did not give their names.

DESCRIBE MEN

The deputy sheriff described them as being about 22 years of age. The man who fired the shots was dark complexioned, was slender and wore a dark suit. The automobile driver was red-faced and had sandy hair. He also had crooked teeth with several gold teeth in his mouth. He wore checkered trousers, Radcliff said. A report of the shooting and a description of the men and their car were broadcast over the Columbus police radio Thursday night.

Later in the night, Deputies Radcliff and Guster went to Lockbourne to investigate the theft of a Ford automobile of John White, Canal Winchester, R. F. D. 2, bearing license plates numbered H-1879.

Besides officers of this county members of Highland, Ross, Fayette, Madison and Franklin-co were watching their highways for the suspects Friday.

Means and Norman T. Whitaker, described as "the fox," are on trial for attempting to swindle Mrs. Evelyn Waish McLean out of $35,000, after Means had already turned her out of $104,000. Means is now serving 15 years for that.

THE CHALLENGE OF LOVE

by WARWICK DEEPIING

SYNOPSIS

The snug little town of Navestock jolted on, rustily, clumsily, contented to jog along in a rut, rejecting the interference of anyone who sought to change its mode of living. The people, therefore, were very antagonistic toward young Dr. John Wolfe, assistant to the town's blundering old Dr. Threadgold, when he tried to better conditions. Wolfe, stumped at the unsanitary conditions he finds everywhere, prepares a map showing the unhealthy districts. Mrs. Threadgold comes upon the map and considering Wolfe's researches "gross disloyalty and underhand spying," suggests that he be warned to discontinue or be discharged. Wolfe's one inducement to keep fighting is the friendship and encouragement of lovely and vivacious Jess Mascall. Wolfe shows Dr. Threadgold the dangerous germs he found in the well-water of a house where there is a case of diphtheria. The narrow-minded Threadgold, afraid to face facts and fearing Wolfe may usurp his position, resents the younger man's "interference." Wolfe warns of a terrible calamity should typhoid fever or cholera strike Navestock. Not wishing to appear superior, Wolfe turns over his findings to Threadgold to do with as he pleases. Later, the old doctor tells his wife a convincing tale of how he put Wolfe in his place. She urges him to burn Wolfe's papers. Discouraged and longing for someone to talk to, Wolfe visits Jess, who urges him to stay and fight. Then, gazing into each other's eyes, they are strangely embarrassed. Josiah Crabbe, the one inhabitant of Navestock who has the courage to live up to his convictions and is hated for it, is keenly interested in Wolfe.

"If you can't show your old friends and patients a little more consideration, we shall go elsewhere for our physic," thundered Turrell.

young man. Expect to find him in my scullery any day. Of course, if he has your instructions I have nothing more to say. But I don't like it. I don't pretend to like it. It will spoil our good feeling, you know. One does not like to quarrel with a man who has brought all one's youngsters into the world."

Jasper Turrell followed these lesser men, reserving his thunder until the last.

"Look here, Threadgold, we have known each other a good many years; what do you mean by inflicting us with a meddlesome cub like this chap Wolfe? I don't take it kindly. What's more, I'm not going to stand it. If you can't show your old friends and patients a little more consideration, confound it—we shall go elsewhere for our physic."

These successive attacks had worked Threadgold into a state of intense irritability. He was furious with Wolfe, and with a weak man's fury that bubbles and chafes in the pot of its own cowardice, Turrell's bullying tone brought the little man to boiling-point.

"Let me tell you, Mr. Turrell, that this young man has caused me infinite irritation. There is no need for any gentleman in Navestock to dictate to me. I have tried patience and advice, but without result. Mr. Wolfe is going."

"Then you are a wise man, Threadgold. The fellow is doing you a great deal of harm."

"He will smash up your practice if you keep him another six months."

The brewer left Threadgold in a state of simmering excitement. He rushed upstairs, hesitated, rushed down again, ascended once more, and burst into the drawing-room, where his wife sat reading at one of the windows.

"Sophia, I can stand this no longer. I'm not going to have Wolfe here another day."

"My dear Montague, don't get so excited about a mere jackanapes!"

"I hate and loathe the very sound of his name."

"Then do what I tell you; get rid of him at once."

"Exactly—quite so. And as to those papers of his—"

"What! You haven't burned them yet?"

"No."

"Bring them up here. I'll see that it is done."

And done it was, in the black Georgian grate of the Prospect House drawing-room. Mrs. Sophia herself removed the pile of white paper shavings and the big yellow fan that served as a screen. Wolfe's statistics disappeared in smoke, and the map remained as so much fluttering ash.

John Wolfe had had a long morning, and had dropped in to eat a lonely meal in the Turkey-carpeted dining-room. He had a country round that afternoon.

There was the freshness of falling dew in the air when Wolfe rode back beside the windings of the Wraith, and saw on the distant hillside the dark shapes of the Moor Farm cypresses. He had seen Jess but once since that hour in the orchard, and she had been a little shy of him, yet with a frank shyness that was very alluring. She had smiled less, looked at him less intently, and spoken as though words had come to have a new and deeper meaning. There had been just a flash of pride for him in her eyes, something dearer than sympathy.

Wolfe had found her a name by which he could name her to himself. "The Maid of Honor," that was what he called Jess. He looked at her and thought of her as a man of the spear and sword thought of the one woman who was his "Lady." She spread courage and cleanness and strength about him. No mean thing could come out of his heart or mouth. "To the uttermost, and without fear," that had been her message.

As John Wolfe rode through Navestock he could not help being struck by the quaintness and beauty of the old town. The calm of a summer evening lay over it, and the threads of blue smoke from the chimneys disappeared in a golden haze. The red brick became a deeper, richer red. Casements caught the sunset. Trees and chimneys stood out against the western sky. Here and there, down passageways and narrow streets, Wolfe caught a glimpse of the river, black under the shadows of black roofs and gables. For an instant the little town was transfigured like an unclean and crippled beggar carried suddenly into Paradise.

Bad Posture a Cause of Frequent Ankle Sprains

If You Are Subject to This Painful Condition Don't Neglect It, and See if You Are Walking Correctly

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York
Former Chairman of the Committee on Health, New York City

DURING THE winter months when pavements and roads are wet and slippery, sprained ankle is a common accident. Even when snow and ice have long disappeared, sprained ankle continues to be an everyday occurrence.

Some persons seem to be susceptible to this accident. This may be explained by individual weakness of the ankles, joints and ligaments of the ankles. The accident may occur when walking, or the wearing of shoes with little support to the ankle. It is a common complaint of women who have weak ankles and wear high heels because of the details of "Dance Fashion."

I am often asked what is the difference between a "wrench" and a "sprain." There is really no difference. A sprain is a wrench joint caused by a sudden twist or pull. It is an extremely painful affliction. At times the pain is so severe that emergency treatment is necessary for its relief.

Be Careful of Permanent Injury

A mild sprain may allow the individual to hobble about with the aid of a cane. Too often a more serious injury of the ankle is mistaken for a wrench or sprain. For example, a person may injure his ankle, complain of pain and nurse the accident. He calls it a sprain and continues to walk on the injured ankle. In neglected permanent injury and permanent may occur.

Permanent pain in the ankle develops as a result of a severe sprain. The pain may be so severe that the individual is unable to stand on the foot. It does not mean that the bone is broken. When, ever in doubt, an X-ray picture of the injured ankle should be taken.

Mourning Cloak Lives on Sep

The mourning cloak, that sturdy butterfly that comes forth from its winter's hibernation in a woodpile or similarly protected spot very early in the spring, feeds upon the exuding sap of trees before the flowers come. The same butterfly lingers long after the most of the flowers are gone in the fall, and then it finds the juices of decaying fruits such as apples to its liking.

The Tower of London

What is commonly known as the Tower of London is really a group of buildings, ramparts, walls, towers and gates, standing on high ground about a half mile below London bridge, commanding the Thames from St. Paul's church to St. Peter's church. The names of two great architects or builders are associated with the construction of its principal piles, the one a Benedictine monk, known as Gundulf, the other an English king, Henry III.

GARDEN CLUB HEARS INTERESTING TALKS

A large attendance enjoyed a most delightful program at the regular meeting of the Pickaway-co Garden club Thursday evening in the Monday club rooms.

A short business session preceded the program. A field trip, called a "Mystery trip," with the destination unknown except by the leader Leslie Pontius, was planned for Sunday, May 21.

Mack Noggle, who is rapidly becoming an authority in that line gave a most interesting talk on "Tropical Fish," their care, propagation and special characteristics. Mr. Noggle used specimens of his own fish in aquariums with which to illustrate.

Ray Dietz, of Columbus, spoke on "Maintenance." He impressed his listeners with the fact that it takes not only beautiful flowers but a well kept lawn and clean driveways and walks to make a really beautiful garden. He carefully explained how to trim shrubs and what shrubs to choose for the small yard; how to rid oneself of insect pests; the right kind of grass seed to plant; how to care for the lawn and trees and how to make a pool.

The fact that a water garden and rock garden are not one and the same thing but something very different was especially stressed.

All together a most instructive talk was enjoyed by every member present.

The next meeting will be held in June, the time to be announced later.

FARLEY READY

and Farley at last has agreed to "deal."

A Democratic civil service commission will step in today Farley promised them, and this will pave the way for a general lifting of the moratorium on political plums. With the inauguration of this program, there was a distinct feeling of uneasiness on the part of those insurgents who have failed to back the President in his program. It is known that the losses of the House have scanned copies of each important roll call. Those who have jumped the fence too often may find themselves without the pull to get jobs for their constituents.

Farley told them frankly that the jobs were going to be given to "deserving Democrats" and "those Republicans who helped us." He said the administration was going to move in such fashion in the matter of patronage that "the victory of last fall will be made permanent."

When Farley finished, 300 fervently grateful congressmen passed before him and wrung his hand.

the president's advisers. They called for voluntary trade agreements to be negotiated by each industry and tough working hours, minimum wages, child labor, competition price wars or fixing minimum sales prices. A federal business control board would be created to protect the public, suspend anti-trust laws and enforce the agreements.

The crux of the plan was enforcement of the agreements against recalcitrant industrial units. The president's congressional advisers were divided over the three plans but Mr. Roosevelt was reported to favor a processing or occupational tax, which could be imposed against an industry as a whole, with exemption of those units abiding by the fair trade agreement. This plan, therefore, was written into a draft of the proposed legislation sent to him for his approval, along with drafts of the alternative enforcement plans.

WORKS PLAN SETTLED

The public works program appeared settled too, except for the method of financing a $3,300,000,000 bond issue. The administration was committed to raise $220,000,000 a year to amortize this bond issue within 20 years, not through general taxation, but by some specific plan of raising new earmarked revenue. The president leaned toward a small industrial sales tax to be called a "reemployment tax." This plan had the endorsement of the American Federation of Labor, providing the proceeds of the bond issue would be used exclusively to provide jobs.

The alternative plans—to tax tea and coffee and to impose a small tax on pay envelopes—were submitted to him by his advisers. The theory behind industrial sales tax and payroll levy was that the entire $3,300,000,000 bond issue would be used to create jobs and increase purchasing power.

The payroll tax, if adopted, would be levied on top of regular income taxes but would be collected monthly. The rate might be as low as 1-4 of one percent.

The American Federation of Labor endorsed the "reemployment tax" in the form of a small industrial sales tax at a recent white house conference. President William Green told Mr. Roosevelt organized labor was ready to accept such a tax in order to provide jobs.
